January 1995. This was fun.

The collage on the two inside cover panels was done from snapshots supplied by the band. The booklet is arranged so that the band members and their names appear when the CD package is opened: the other musicians appear only when the folder is removed and opened. The square images over the collage are supposed to evoke Moyerbridge... they use figures from the band's existing logotype, as simplified into the "painting" which appears on the front and rear covers.

My brother David took the cover photo- we used props from our father's painting studio, where the shoot took place. I created two logotypes for the project: one for the production company and one for the label, and tried to link them visually-
